Answer to a Letter.

The Old Boys, Solomon, Gollath, Sampson, Moses, and Others Had Their Troubles.

THE CAUSE OF POVERTY.

A few days ago I received the following letter from a young lady in Cloverport. I know she must be beautiful and sweet and nice and all that because she calls me Major. The note concerned a subject that I am deeply interested in, and she had signed the other half to her name I would have wanted a two cent stamp in answering her individually; but I do not know how to do it, so I will answer her through the News, as many there who would like to know.

"My dear Mr. Major—I see by the press that you are a candidate for Congress in one of the Kentucky districts, which one I do not know, but am really glad it is not the Fourth. Men who are of Congressional proportions are supposed to know many things, but I find that their constituents are always disappointed. I know that my papa always because he was turned out of church for coming one of our Congressmen, because all that number did in two terms was to send my papa a nice fat package of cantaloupes and when they grew ripe my mama didn't have room in our house for the nice little long-necked gards that came from those seeds. Now, other Congressmen cantaloupes with papa and some of them won't with me. So what I want you to tell me, Mr. Major, is this: What is the cause of poverty?"

"What is the cause of poverty? I have heard you have practiced it long enough to know all about it. Yours truly, Bess."

You are a nice girl, Bess, but you must never again call me Major. I'm not running a ferry boat, and besides, the people might get in the habit of calling me that and I wouldn't be able to get an office in this life, nor a pension after the new war, and it might also serve to keep me outside of the gay ropes of the heavenly circus.

You are the subject. In the beginning I called you wise, because you had sense enough to ask the only man on earth who might be able to answer you correctly. Ma and Sampson and Moses and Solomon and Gollath and Hanson, Mitchell and Henri Waterson and some of the gang I saw last night have tried ways to solve this problem, but none of them could help myself. Solomon, who was a sound money man, tried to do it one way, through the solution, but his youngest wife broke him by taking money lessons and Delante and morphia; Moses thought he was the clearing in the cattle industry, but he didn't understand the horse, and you know he was caught in some of the bull rubbers; Gollath tried it in the prize ring, but a fellow named Mike hit him over the head with a cane and gave him a severe headache and he went home with his head aching and his eyes swollen; Waterson imitated Sampson when he posed Bryan and so you see it's all left to me and Hanson Mitchell, but the angels are weeping for Hanson and we'll let him pass.

Now, my good Bess, there are some things we must all keep in mind as we pass through this vale of lacrymal distillation, and all of them have to do with the cause of poverty, although there is not sufficient space in this country to tell them all.

You must learn that wealth cannot be brought low, but you must also learn that wealth can help you out of a great many difficulties.

You must also remember that one-half of the world does not know how to patch their shoes as under the Prince Albert coats of the other half, but is always trying to find out.

One time there was a pretty girl and her name was to her:

"O, white, daughter, white!
And you may have a cow."
And the girl said:
"I never wanted in my life
And I can't white cow."
And her ma said:
"O, white, daughter, white!
And you may have a man."
And the girl said:
"I never white in my life
But I'll white it in my life."

The above few paragraphs are all this philosophy I have in stock to-day, and I am sure you understand them as you read me. Now, Bess, before I explain the cause of poverty I desire to say that the best way for the general public to send me to Congress, I'll make just four pounds which are:

"I'll draw my salary in advance if possible.

"I'll send the civil service law, and I'll try to reform the currency so that everybody will get some of it."

Now, for the poverty business. We have 300 days in a year (365 days minus 65 days which leave Mr. Jaanvinkrantz, working man, who is my neighbor, $1.24 to spend and get paid for at 31 cents; most of nine holidays, and we have been told to be "Christened" in the year; my man is sick 30 days, and he has left 24 days; he must give up four days to attend funerals of relatives and friends and "g" it, and then, owing to the means of the day, he has to spend the better of his earnings, making a dozen days off, which leave him 2021 days. These few days seem brief enough indeed to the industrious folk like myself who talk the big and the brave and who are willing to work on forever like the brook and hog year, but still yet more golden days must come off the dial of time for the man for whom Mr. Jaanvinkrantz is working a day overworked, or fatigued, or his machinery breaks down, or his wife goes off on a visit, or his home burns down or, according to the law, he and his close friend for 72 days, which of course leave the poor man but 2001 days. But this is not all; his employer beats him out of 27 days' pay; which is enough to keep Jaanvinkrantz from only the church and doing several other little things in ought to do. We find him now with only 1733 days left. Then he spends ten days in going to political meetings when he already knows how he is going to vote, and he has 1633 days. Next his wife goes against the peddler, the picture frame or some confidence game, and loses one of the [in] art or dam din frame that nobody knows what they are used for. Mr. Jaanvinkrantz may have a new hat and somebody's wife will do the same for him, and he has lost one of the drama see him back to about 1500 days.

Poor Jaanvinkrantz! And the story is not quite told. His wife spends 45 days looking for work. He looks so patiently that his eyes hurt, and then Jaanvinkrantz spend five days in looking for a pair of gloves to protect his eyes and the poor devil then has only 1445 days left to live. But he collects what is due on the last Saturday night of the last week of the year he goes up town gleefully, "I'm going to have a party for 72 days, and my quarter for his one-fourth day's work in another pocket. He is going to spend that quarter for three drinks and pay his debts and take lots of nice things home for his wife and babies."

Jaenvinkrantz's mind is thoroughly made up to do that, but Jaenvinkrantz has no mind. He goes to his three drinks and three more and then thirty, and presents his wife a happy and knows where he can find plenty of money to morrow, and all that!

He pays a bill, takes to him a house and he has a crying—not for him, but for bread and love and clothes and Christ. And the next day he has nothing but a headache and—G-d is too good to kill him!

And the world is full of Mr. Jaenvinkrantz!

And this is the cause of poverty!

W. R. FRANK.

Persons who are troubled with indigestion will be interested in the experience of Wm. H. Ryan, chief clerk of the railway mail service at Des Moines, Iowa, who writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the merits of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For two years I have suffered from indigestion, and an subject to frequent severe attacks of pain in the stomach and bowels. One of two doses of this remedy cured me. Price 25 and 50 cents; for sale by A. R. Fisher, Cloverport, R. A. Shillman, Stephensport.

Of Good Character.

The following correspondence of a witness to a case in Western North Carolina is sent us as a actual occurrence:

District Attorney—No. Mr. Blunkins, I have been over the case of the cattle industry, but he didn't understand the horse, and you know he was caught in some of the bull rubbers; Gollath tried it in the prize ring, but a fellow named Mike hit him over the head with a cane and gave him a severe headache and he went home with his head aching and his eyes swollen; Waterson imitated Sampson when he posed Bryan and so you see it's all left to me and Hanson Mitchell, but the angels are weeping for Hanson and we'll let him pass.

CLOVERPORT.

William F. Bryan today.

(Washington Post.)

The attempt on the part of the gold organs to denigrate William F. Bryan as a "bad number," a "dead issue," and to relegate him to the limbo of insignificant, insignificant, insignificant, do not strike as being particularly happy. Whether he has been inspired by honest ignorance of public sentiment throughout the country, or are mere demagogues of malice and deceit, we do not undertake to say. Perhaps we should accept both explanations with a geographical division, attributing the ignorance to the East and the deceitful purpose to the West. No newspaper in the United States has a poorer understanding of popular opinion than the "great metropolitan dailies," because none are so close to their own constituencies, and of the overwhelming importance of the community they represent. To find the true provincial, the hopelessly narrow view of the world, the "great metropolitan dailies" have the last word. Compared with that big, bumptious and complacent aggression of price, Hoge, Texas, is a veritable cosmopolite. We can easily believe that New York is an so-called "great city" when they say that Mr. Bryan is a closed incident, for they regard their own verdict on a national issue as beyond appeal.

Neither conceal or misrepresentation will avail to dispose of Mr. Bryan. Every intelligent and comprehensive observer of public events knows that he is stronger with the party today than he was yesterday, and he has lost none of the marvelous personal influence which he exerted during the campaign of 1890; that the principles for which he stands are as soundly supported by the Democratic masses as they were when Bryan proclaimed them with the fire of his enthusiasm and the witchery of his eloquence. No one need be deceived by the circumstances of the recent campaign in New York city. The fact that Tammany ignored the Chicago platform is of no significance. We may admit that the immediate purpose of that particular struggle, and order to recover control of municipal affairs—to recall Greater New York, in fact, from the disposition of an impudent and hypocritical tyrant—was a Democratic mass committed to the Croker-Walshy program. But that proves nothing. Indeed, we may say that, even if it involved the permanent rejection of Bryan and the Chicago declaration of war, the New York fact—which it does not—the fact would be of minor consequence. The Democratic of the nation are not under the influence of the millions who voted for Mr. Bryan in 1890 do not look in that direction for guidance and leadership. They would not move one hair's breadth from their present position, yet to be so with them with absolute security. They lost in 1890. They have no calculation based upon New York as an index.

Let no one imagine that Mr. Bryan is a dead issue. If a Democratic convention were to assemble to-day, he would be without serious competitor. Unless all political conditions be revolutionary, or Mr. Bryan be the even stronger two years hence.

Bryan's Ignorance.

(From the St. Louis Republic.)

Bryan's speeches in Mexico, according to some of this country's papers, show that he knows very little about Mexico's history or politics. This discovery does not surprise anybody on this side of the Rio Grande. Bryan's speeches in this country show that he knows very little about Mexico's history or politics. Mr. McKim, of Louisville, was in town Saturday in the interest of the Cincinnati

Cooperative Company.

Dock Furrow and family, of Kirk, were in town yesterday. They left yesterday for Louisville to be with relatives.

Steve Parker, Louisville, sold his crop of tobacco, which amounted to 6,000 pounds, to James B. Pace, Jr., for $9.50, $9 and 21.

Harry Moorhead came up from Owensboro Sunday to spend a few hours with his parents.

Mr. Sarah E. Chaffin died at her home in Louisville last Saturday, January 22. She was 77 years old. Mrs.

Chaffin formerly lived in this town and at Hardinsburg, where she was 56.

She was a splendid Christian woman and her many friends here will regret to hear of her death. She was the mother-in-law of Judge T. M. McNeill.

Ramona L. Sills, of Cincinnati, Ind.,

has brought suit in the United States

Court at Owensboro, against the heirs of Samuel Sills, Sr., deceased, for the recovery of his interest and the debt involuntarily made. The whole amount will in the aggregate amount to something near $20,000. Murray & Murray

this city, are engaged as counsel for the plaintiff.

Ed C. Adkinson, of Irrigation, has been doing duty at the depot as operator for several days during the absence of Mr.

Sills. Ed is a good one, too, for his age and experience. He picked up the business by working and doing chores around the office at Irrigation. It shows what a boy can do when he has the will to do it. We hope Ed will be rewarded with a good place.

Dr. Lane's Illustrated Lecture on Japan

at the First Presbyterian church Friday night will be one of the finest ever given in this city. Be sure you hear and see it. If the water should be over in the city's free transportation will be furnished all holding admission tickets.

Bakery or Sills's.

Johnsboro, Ark., Feb. 22nd, 1897.

C. W. Kanner, of Sheldon, Ia., was troubled with catarrh for over two years

so that he could only work a few days at a time; tried various doctors without relief. Per-na cured him permanently.

Mrs. Thomas W. New Brighton, Pa.,

suffered with aggravated sore throat

which the doctor could not cure. Three bottles of Per-na cured her. Bernard

King, National Military Home, Leaven-

worth, Kas., neglected a severe cold which developed into catarrh. Tried everything he saw advertised without relief. Per-na not only cured the catarrh, but an old case of bronchitis. A.

Carlson, Lindstrom, Minn., took a course of treatment with Per-na for catarrh of the throat and was cured. He delayed reporting for several months in order to see if it were permanent;

so unimpaired is appearing, he has concluded that the cure is

permanent. H. Cox
